To my big sister--that's a lie. I must be bigger than you are. Thank you for everything that I will always remember.
Good luck next year. I'm sure you'll be a wonderful year.

WINCHESTER - THURSTON

CLASS OF 1964 PRESENTS

THISTLEDOWN

Foreword

The transition in which we have been involved during the past year has not been purely a physical one. Influenced by the elegance and dignity of our new environment, we have strived for revision toward this ideal, not only in our appearance of dignity as evidenced in our new spring uniforms and the aspiration of elegance in the alteration of the class ring, but more important in the dignity and elegance of our spirit.

We, the class of 1964, have the distinction of being the first class graduated from our "new home." But for us, this means more than can merely be inferred from the title. It means an adventure in the development of ourselves in coupling our former tradition of familiarity with this new spirit of dignity. It is this, our new Spirit, that we hope to have captured, at least in part, in our Thistledown 1964.

M.D.M.

Dedication

During our past years at Winchester Thurston we have not always been aware of the influences of individuals upon the development of our integrity and desire for knowledge. But there are two people whose guidance we shall always remember.

We met Mrs. Houston in Lower School. Even with her many obligations and responsibilities, she never failed to be a friend to the students. The click of her heels as she came from her office to study hall, the openness with which she received any student's problems and the patience with which she taught the "grown up" seventh graders, we shall never forget. But even more there will remain the memory of every day's end: looking up into her face as she shook our hands and wished us a good-bye.

When we entered Upper School, we at once felt the direction of Mrs. Hutson. Her frank wit and keen perception led us to a deeper understanding of ourselves. The enthusiasm with which she taught her classes developed within us a love of knowing. Despite the number of seniors, she has shown a sincere interest in each girl's future and has offered valuable advice to guide us. It is with pride that we rise to her every morning.

With fond respect and admiration we dedicate the 1964 Thistledown to Rachel McCormick Houston and Hazel Cole Hutson.

Student Council

The Student Council this year has laid the foundation for a revised attitude toward student discipline. In co-operation with the faculty, they have provided the incentive for proper conduct by condensing the rules to further the individual's judgment and by establishing a reward in the form of a Merit Holiday.

Ode to the Senior Class

I am a class—a half a hundred people.

Do you know that all these have come together to make me what I am?

I am the many beliefs in God, the many hopes and aspirations that each has had.

I am as many ways of life as I am in number. (The root of man gives forth many seeds.) Each matures in her own environment, but at any moment she may become one in union with others.

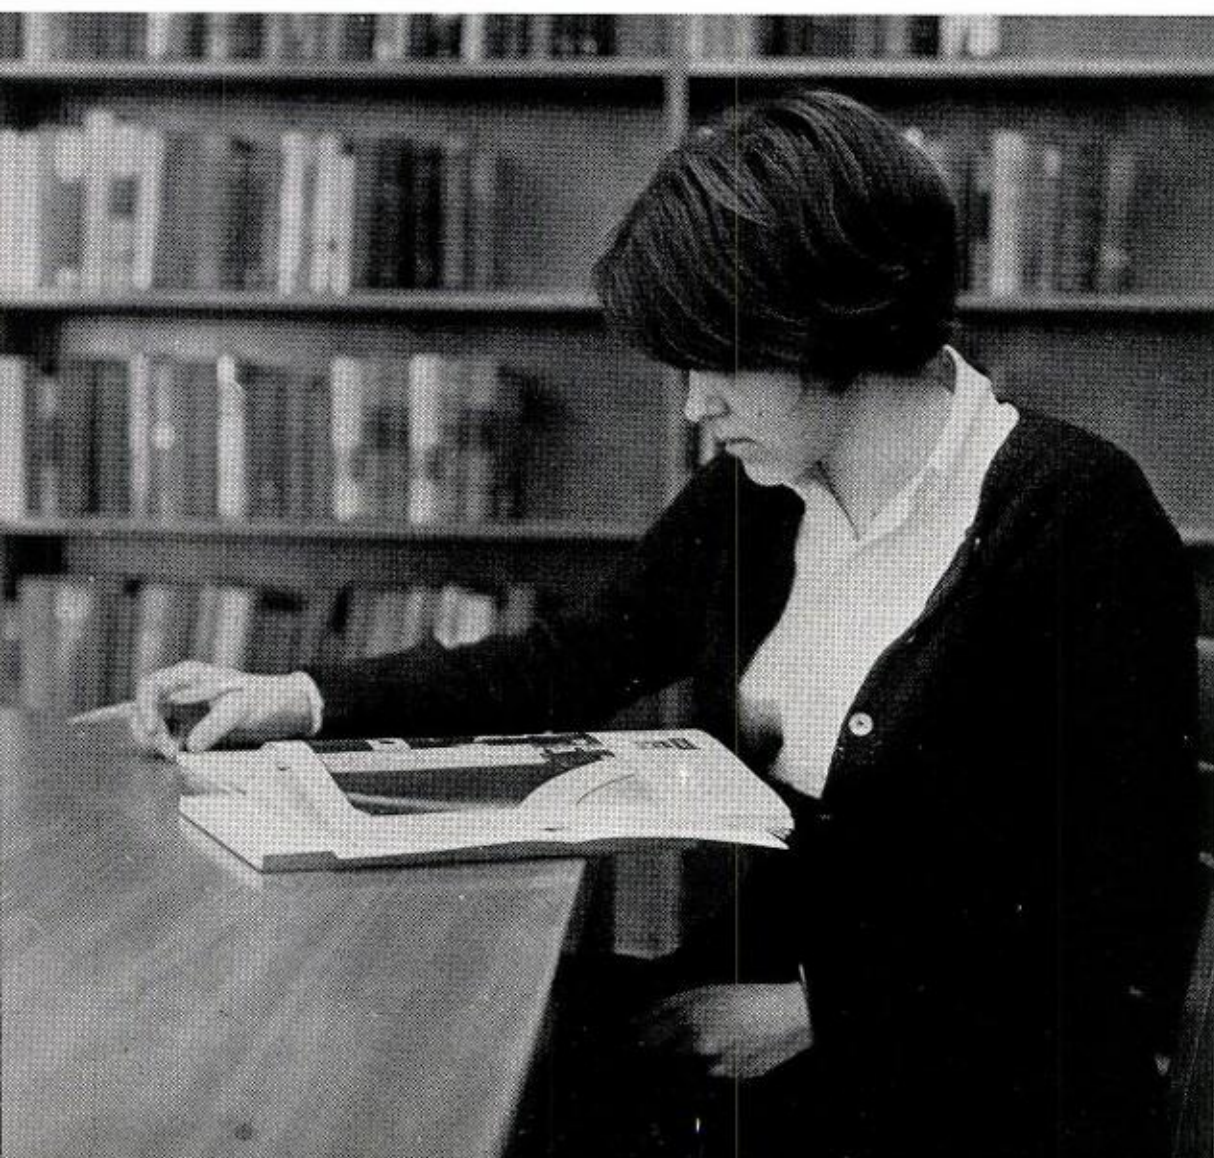

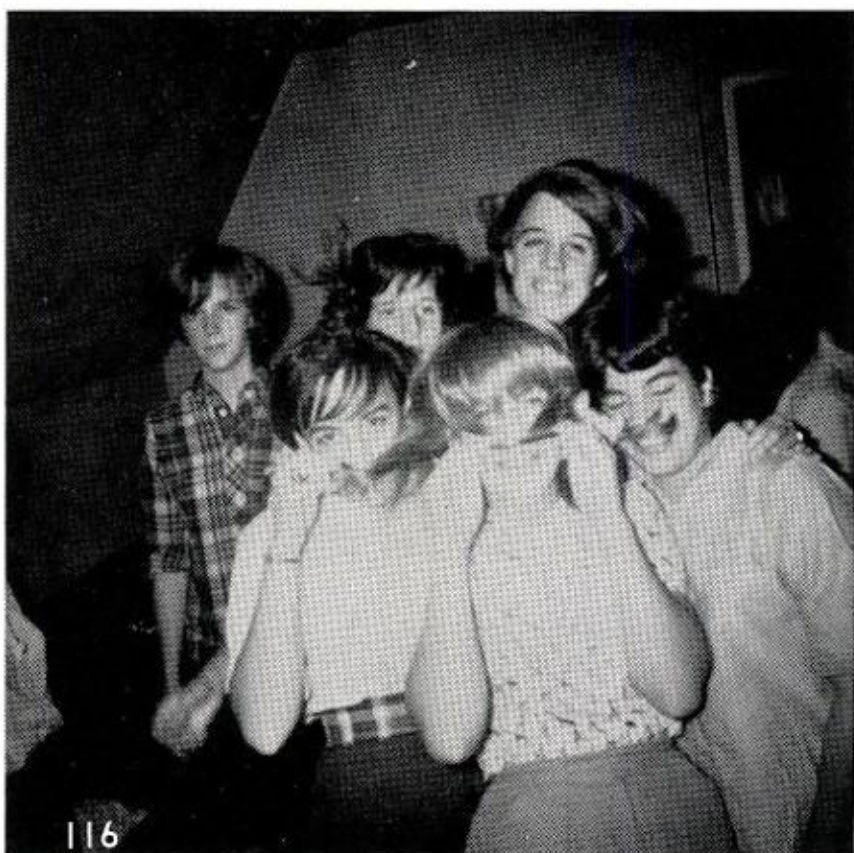

I am a pace setter. Hiding a thousand private jokes, I meet with serious mind the work I face. I laugh
with a child's laugh.
I am a Friday adult.

Sometimes I want to ignore what I must do. But what has become my conscience usually directs me. I am thankful.
I will remember.

When each part of me has felt the friendships as deeply
as she is able, has lent these experiences together to the development of herself, then
I will have served my selves.
I will be thankful.
I will remember.

I am the future of my present life.

It's been the source of so much fun
We've grown accustomed to the way
We work and play each day
Mid-terms; bells call
The study halls
We've made so many different friends
And learned so many different skills
We're very grateful we have parents
Who can send us here to school
We have learned our A B C's
And know the Golden Rule
And although some of us were new
Before our years were through
We've grown accustomed to each face.

Farewell

In a sense, the year 1963-1964 was a year of adjustment; the student body had to experience the three seasons in school, had to see what traditions were kept, discarded or innovated in the new building before feeling fully established in it. And in a sense our class was a bit of a misfit because our stay was so temporary. Yet the very newness of the situation, the very small duration of our "visit" made the personality of the class become more definite and more permanent. We were a happy class, unimpressed with sophistication, yet for that reason possessing some of our own. We were a sensitive class, quickly changing from one mood to another. Our friendships were many, and our loyalties fast and enduring. Our talent and intelligence, while rarely brilliant, were obvious and quietly ever present. Our interest in learning and life was always ready to be aroused. We are a class eager for the future, always smiling about the past while reveling in the present.

Winchester has helped give us the incentive to discover our capabilities, and has provided the materials with which to use them in an atmosphere conducive to growth of both the intellect and personality. She is a place of growth, where one may be young and frivolous as well as steady and diligent. All of our experiences, the class, the exams, the Senior days and the follies combined to form a past so easy to smile about in the future.

Peg!

I know you're going to be the greatest student Council Pres. W-T
has ever seen. Next year
ought to be really cool.
year. I hope you get out to Sewickley this summer
if you don't really have a great time.

Mia
